Call it Creative - Finding Out About Soviet Union and its Utopianism

Introduction

If empiricism organized Soviet history, Istabal argues, we would know something beyond wages.

I. We are Working on A lot of Material – even a lot of sciences, and a lot of talking writing as we call it

II. Told to be scientific at all through

III. Empiricism is then only the failure, to be empirical is the future, it is just methodical empiricism needed

Slavoj Zizek –

Yes I do argue empiricism is the future, Anglo-Saxon empiricism, but it needs that philosophical style as well.

Lenin –

Materialism and empirico-criticism again – I mean be empirical but also have categories – this is the current crisis, what is called material jottings is then missing empiricism, but when we talk we get the process better. It should be highly methodical about empiricism.

Trotsky –

I mean be empiricist but be Soviet. Like experimentalism is also a style.

Call it Creative –

This boring method debate is about actually “History” or even “Sociology” or even daily talking going like what Trotsky calls jotting all through. He means it will keep being typewritten, and a lot works if we are really empirical. When we speak in this style of politics it is just the process of the same stuff mainly – empiricism adds a lot more.

Slavoj Zizek –

I imagine life more like Tarde and empiricism, it should be like that the day – an attempt –

“I am walking, sleepily and there is some work in a bank or in an office, and that’s news. Sleepily though. My crisis if I have any, is then sleepily handled, just keep talking and yawning, and sleepily studying this paper – it says you are fine in one month, and I argue sleepily though I am fine already, because I have to go for a walk.”
